

RUTH EPSTEIN REPUBLICAN-AMERICAN

Liliya Kimma, 3, of Sharon, shows the fruits of her labor from the Easter egg hunt held by Sharon Day Care on Saturday.

RUTH EPSTEIN REPUBLICAN-AMERICAN

Helene Minton, a member of the Sharon Day Care board, hands out goody bags to those who participated in the Easter egg hunt Saturday. The event, sponsored by the day care, was held at Sharon Center School.

■ ■ ■
SHARON — Sharon Center School's backyard on Saturday was the site of a scramble to collect Easter eggs.

The event, sponsored by Sharon Day Care, had youngsters divided into three age groups. Helene Minton, a day care board member, said 525 eggs were scattered. As soon as the signal was given, the young participants were off and running to grab them.

When all the eggs were retrieved, they were brought back and the youngsters were given goody bags.

The hunt is held annually in any type of weather. Saturday's weather was sunny, but a bit brisk. There have been years when participants slogged through snow to pick up the booty.

TIME TO SAMPLE THE GOODIES

RUTH EPSTEIN REPUBLICAN-AMERICAN

Emma Grace Fechteler shows off the booty she received during the Easter egg hunt put on by the Sharon Daycare Center on Saturday. She is with her friend Chloe Decker, who is checking out her goodies.